

Elisabet Pèriz Fernàndez

Elisabet Pèriz Fernàndez is catalan, economist of the University of Barcelona, Master in International Relations and Development. She has been working in Colombia for 8 years, and currently works as a researcher in the Centro de Estudios para la Justicia Social TIERRA DIGNA, where is the coordinator of the Business and Human Rights area.

Tierra Digna is a Colombian nonprofit organization dedicated to defending the territory, life and culture of communities affected by extractive development projects promoted by the Colombian Government and private capital. They believe that it is possible for communities to live according to their own worldview, to build their own development alternatives and to walk towards social justice and a dignified life. Tierra Digna strives to provide communities, primarily rural, with comprehensive accompaniment (community empowerment, legal advising, advocacy and research) so that communities can thoroughly enjoy their rights.
